Section 2: How super works

Superannuation is a means of saving for retirement which is, in part, compulsory. Most Australian employers are required by Government legislation to contribute a minimum of 9.5% of an employee's ordinary time earnings to a superannuation fund nominated by the employee or, if an employee does not nominate a fund, to the employer's default fund, that offers a "My Super" product. These compulsory contributions are referred to as Superannuation Guarantee (SG) contributions. You can also make contributions towards superannuation.

There are different types of contributions available to a person including SG contributions, additional employer contributions (for example, salary sacrifice contributions), voluntary member contributions and government co-contributions.

There are limitations on the contributions to, and withdrawals, from superannuation. These limitations apply to all superannuation funds.

Superannuation receives concessional tax treatment, that is, tax savings are provided by the Government. Refer to Section 7 of this PDS for more information.

As most people have a right to choose into which fund their employer should direct their SG contributions (called "Choice of Fund"), it's important you take an interest in your super and help it grow into a healthy retirement nest egg. Contact your employer to check whether you can make a Choice of Fund. Further information about Choice of Fund is available from www.ato.gov.au.

You can access your superannuation savings once you retire on or after reaching your preservation age or in other circumstances permitted by law (for example, death, permanent incapacity and financial hardship), called "conditions of release". The conditions of release for temporary residents vary from those applicable to Australian citizens, New Zealand citizens or permanent residents of Australia.

There are certain circumstances in which superannuation benefits must be transferred by the Trustee to the Tax Office (for example, small or unidentifiable lost accounts, unclaimed benefits on or after age 65 and unclaimed benefits of former temporary residents).

General information about super is available from www.moneysmart.gov.au.

You can also make additional superannuation contributions. Even small amounts, can help grow your superannuation balance over time. You can make additional contributions by:

o salary sacrificing – asking your employer to deduct additional contributions from your pay before tax is deducted;

o making personal contributions from your own savings or after-tax earnings;

o self-employed contributions – self-employed members may be able to claim a tax deduction for their superannuation contributions; and o transferring the superannuation you have in another fund to Lindfield Super.

You should read the important information about how super works before making a decision. Section 6: Fees and costs

DID YOU KNOW?

Small differences in both investment performance and fees and costs can have a substantial impact on your long term returns. You should consider whether features such as superior investment performance or the provision of better member services justify higher fees and costs.
